Dear FREELANCER,

Season greetings! I write to you with an unwavering spirit of camaraderie and team-ship. I hope this missive finds you in good health and robust fit. It's been centuries past since the dark era of the transatlantic slave trade etched its mark on American history, yet the memories linger as if it were yesterday. In the wake of Black History celebration, we find ourselves at a critical juncture—a time to reflect, but more importantly, a time to act. For too long, the narratives of Black history have been marginalized, relegated to the sidelines of mainstream discourse. Yet, as Freeman Morgan reminds us, Black history is not a footnote in American history; it is the very foundation upon which our nation stands.

Weeks ago, my freelance team received an invitation to bench with Pentagram and the Boston institute of history. The project aims at streamlining culture and events that centers on the premise of “black history”. Indeed, your response to our recent advert demonstrates your value for arts and creativity. Our forthcoming endeavor would encompass insightful writing, stunning graphics, translations and creativity to both the online and physical magazine and we hope to top the chart of best sellers after publication.

It is with great pleasure that I extend my earnest invitation to join our freelance team to work on a black history project. We are located at 4th Avenue Road, Goodlet Place, San Francisco, California 94102. You can reach us via +1 (786) 936-4552 or via our website www.pixelgig.org. As a remote team mate, you would be obligated to attend our video conference call via zoom weekly. We foster a culture of creativity and diversity that serves as the foundation for our groundbreaking projects and gigs. We believe that regardless of where you're from, your skills and inclination to innovate ideas could make a difference for you and for us. We have chosen to prove ourselves once again and we have selected freelancers across various geographical borders and culture even as far as Africa.

Regarding compensation, we operate on a per-gig basis, with payments typically ranging from $120 to $750 per completed gig. With work time taking weeks or months to complete. To foster transparency, we believe in upfront remuneration. Our upcoming gig is budgeted at $18,500. We are projecting 13 days for your intern with a compensatory equivalence of $435. You would be joining 34 other selected applicants from different parts of the world to work on this elaborate project on black history which involves some local language translations. There would be a compulsory introductory zoom video call on Wednesday, 21st of May, 2025 which would be facilitated by team mates here in San Francisco and some in London. It's mandatory you go through the book "team work" by Natalie Dawson to foster team spiritednesses.

More ideally, You'll be given a 15 minutes session to talk during this introductory sessions. This session aims to provide us with valuable insights on your professionalism and team spiritedness. We hope you are fired up and bring your A-game onboard.

More also, you would receive a stipend from us after on-boarding. That is a quarter of your pay upfront immediately after the zoom coaching session. Do tell us your country mode of payment as we learnt that PayPal is no longer used by all countries due to some restrictions.

Your inclusion in our freelance team marks the beginning of an exciting journey together. We are enthusiastic about the contributions you will make to our projects. We hope to get the best from you in this jungle of creativity.

Looking forward to a mutually beneficial collaboration!

Warm regards,
